The bronze medal game of this event was between the teams from Argentina and Canada. Canada scored first on an extra man situation. Argentina scored right back with a counter attack cross pass goal to tie the game at 1. Both missed open shot opportunities in the first quarter, not allowing either team to develop a strong offensive pattern. A good lob shot and a strong finish on a counter-attack helped Argentina to get a 3-1 lead. A good extra man shot cut the lead to 3-2 to end the quarter. In the second quarter, Canada started playing solid man to man defense, not allowing Argentina to use their bread and butter center forward attack. Knowing that, the team from South America started shooting from the perimeter with great success. Argentina went to their drop back zone, which allowed Canada to score from a six meter and from a counter attack to cut Argentina's lead to one goal. It was then when Argentina scored three consecutive goals to increase their lead at halftime 7-3. The third quarter was one with very few goals and very little action that led to exclusions. During the quarter there was only one exclusion and that was with 13 seconds left. Both teams scored two goals in the quarter, allowing Argentina to take a commanding 9-5 lead into the fourth quarter. The final quarter saw Argentina score from extra man, penalty, center forward goals, while at the same time not allowing Canada good shots. Their tight zone defense was very effective, stopping Canada. With the win Argentina gets the bronze medal. They were led in scoring by Setti (#7) with four goals. Todorovic (#8) led Canada in scoring with 2 goals.
